the golden-color of tea, without greatly impairing their transparency. The cause of the difference in the color of lakes and rivers has engaged the at-tention of many colebrated investigators of nature, such as Typdall, Bunsee. Arago, Sainto Ciuire, Deville and otnera. Recently Prof. Spring, of the University of Liege, has carefully investigated the question of the color of water and has reached some interesting conclu-sions. According to him absolutely pure water when seen in masses of sufficient thickness is blue and all the varieties of color exhibited in lakes and streams arise from the presence in the water of mineral salts of different degrees of sol-utillity and varying quantities.

Water containing corbonate of lime In a state of almost complete solution re-mains blue, but if the solution is lercomplete the water will have a tinge of green, which will grow stronger as the point of precipitation is approached. Prof. Spring concludes that, if lime is added to blue water in which so mucarbonate of lime is already dis-solved that the point of satusa ion is approached, the water will become green.
